We have never met a man insanely jealous of his offspring. The last form of insane jealousy to which we refer is that in reference to friends. Here again the disorder is mostly a feminine one. Women believe that influences are at work to loosen the bonds of established friendship; they dwell on the slightest signs of want of affection and magnify them. These cases are more frequent in middle-aged, single women who have poured out their affection upon some female friend. These women-friendships have something peculiar in them, the relationships being often emotional and associated with unhealthy mutual self-analysis. A gradual change in this relationship may lead to passionate jealousy, with fancies that the once loved one has become influenced against, and believes all sorts of moral evils of, her friend. Such jealousy may lead to violent hatred and to acts of passion. We have known the idol attacked and seriously damaged. To sum up. Jealousy as a symptom of insanity may occur in men and women, and may be the chief among other symptoms of mental disorder; or it may be the residuum of a more or less acute attack of insanity, a form of monomania. It may affect the marital, the parental, or the social relationships. It may occur in the single or married; it is more common in women; it may be connected with age and...
